The Company

Springbrook Cranberry is a family-owned and operated organic cranberry growing and processing operation, established in New Brunswick, Canada in 1998. In 2005, Springbrook began the transition to organic and in 2008 they were certified.

Organic cranberries

You would not know it to look at them, but organic cranberries are a precious treat! Organic cranberry production is extraordinarily difficult as farmers work with decreased yields and increased pests and disease. But to Larry Nason and his family, it's well worth the struggle.

The team

We would like to introduce the people behind Springbrook Cranberry Inc., Larry, Kathy, Elizabeth and Rebekah Nason. Farming has always been a passion for Larry, from childhood he was helping out on a farm. Through the years he has had cattle, sheep and vegetables. He finally settled on cranberries in the late 90's. Kathy, Larry's wife, brings 30+ years of business experience to the company. She takes care of the financial and promotional aspects. Their eldest daughter, Elizabeth, handles the accounting and helps wherever an extra set of hands are needed. And Rebekah, she returned to manage the farm after attaining her Master's in Agriculture in 2007. It was her passion for the environment and organics that prompted Larry to transition to organic.

Canada organic standards give consumers confidence that their food is produced in such a way that is sustainable and harmonious with the environment.
