The company

Since 1956, Victoria Co-op Fisheries Ltd. has harvested and processed a significant portion of the East Coast's freshest and tastiest seafood.

About the Co-op

Located in the pristine Northeast Highlands region of Cape Breton Island, the Co-op purchases a variety of seafood from over 140 inshore commercial fishing vessels. The majority of product is purchased from vessels that are locally owned and operated by Co-op members.

This forward-thinking co-operative returns dividends to its members, while maintaining adequate reserves to ensure that the Co-op is able to withstand the challenges of the continually evolving fishery and world markets.

The plant

Victoria Co-operative Fisheries Ltd. Processing Plant is located in the beautiful village of New Haven, Nova Scotia.

In addition to the production areas, there are two blast freezers and one cold holding freezer. Also located on the grounds is a lobster holding facility.

And we have a completely functioning in-house lab that enables us to test our products prior to shipping.
